

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method of conducting a home inspection business may be characterized as including the steps of offering to a customer a first inspection service limited to visual 5 inspection of tangible attributes of a building; offering to the same customer a second inspection service including at least visual inspection for physical sources of non-tangible air-borne contaminants and toxins in the building; providing the first inspection service; and, providing the second inspection service contemporaneously in the building with the first inspection service at a cost effective price value that otherwise would be beyond the means of 10 an average purchaser.